contents of the work by the preface, which I heresith submit.

AMERICAN MUSEUM, Oct. 19, 1854.

I have been repeatedly urged within the last few years to write my life, being assured by publishers that such a work would have an extensive circulation, and by persenal friands that it would be a reachable book.

In these pages I have given the true history of my many adventures, and the numerous enterprises in which I have been engaged.

Those who puruse this volume will see that my carethas been truly a checkered one. I have been a farm wiboy and a merchant, a clerk and a manuser, a showman and a president. I have been in jails and in paleose, have known poverty and abundance; have travelled over a large portion of two continents; have 'soncountered all varieties of men, have seen every thase of human char soter, and I have on several cocasions been in finament personal peril.

In all this I have had some sad experiences, but on the whole my life has been a merry one I have looked chiefly on the bright side of things, and from the various ascedotes with which thats volume is interspersed, som, of my readers may think I have inclined too much to the indicrous. For this an explanation may be found in my constitutional bias, the associations of my youth, and the nature of my purusits. I trust, ho
